

Food Critic Reviews

If you're headed to Little Szechuan... pick up some friends on your way. You're going to want to roll at least three deep to stage a multi-order attack on the menu, which offers more than 200 dishes... More adventurous diners can wade into funkier fare like the pork ear shreds or tongue slices, while the traditionalists can delight in how well Little Szechuan does staples like kung pao chicken and stir-fried pea tips... Divide and conquer.

-2009 Best of the Twin Cities, City Pages

My favorite Szechuan place remains Little Szechuan in St. Paul, which also happens to be one of only two restaurants in all of St. Paul for which you will consistently wait for a table... The food is phenomenal – and phenomenally hot. The people of the Szechuan province believe that there is a sixth taste to food, the quality of ma la, which translates roughly as “tingling and numbing,” which you may think of as “excruciating” or “delightful.”

- 2009 Twin Cities Best Takeout, Minnesota Monthly

For years, Chinese-food lovers pined for a place that featured a credible Sichuan bill of fare. Last year we got it with Little Szechuan... Bamboo shoots with spicy oil, fish fillet with tofu in spicy broth, Chung King chili shrimp, and beef stew with spicy hot sauce are guaranteed to set your taste buds tingling.

- 2008 The Best of the Twin Cities, Mpls St. Paul Magazine

Little Szechuan vaulted onto the scene this year with a menu offering equal pain and suffering to all: If you wanted the numbing, burning bliss of Beef and Tofu cooked with Spicy Tasty Broth you'd get said bubbling, numbing chili inferno... Eureka! Bring on the delectable, paper-thin beef short ribs, trot out the platters of emerald-green pea tips, and load up on sea-foam-green meadows of cucumber topped with handfuls of black-red chili pods... Call it a miracle, call it a joy.

- 2007 Best of the Twin Cities, City Pages

I did not experience a single misstep in any of my five visits to what is easily the best eatery in the east metro, and one of the handful of honest and authentic Chinese dining experiences citywide. Little Szechuan's food is superb.

- Andrew Zimmern, Mpls St. Paul Magazine

Little Szechuan isn't one of those generic Chinese restaurants that puts the word "Szechuan" in its name for marketing purposes, oh no no no. Little Szechuan is the real deal, a Szechuan specialist that uses chili peppers the way blizzards use snow. This is how Szechuan food should be. I think Little Szechuan is the best thing to happen to St. Paul in years.

- Dara Moskowitz, City Pages

Are they authentic? A Chinese-American friend tells me that they come closer to dishes he's had in China than anything he has had at other U.S. Chinese restaurants.

- Jeremy Iggers, Star Tribune

The food is the real deal – woodsy, oily, spicy and hot enough to make your eyes water and numb your tongue. In other words, addictively Delicious.

- Kathie Jenkins, St. Paul Pioneer Press
